WEEKLY STUDENT INTERNSHIP JOURNAL

STUDENT INTERN: ALTHEA MARIE N. SAN JUAN	PROGRAM: BS IN NURSING
DATE: FEBRUARY 2 – 5, 2026

WEEK 1

ACCOMPLISHMENT	DIFFICULTIES ENCOUNTERED	NEW LEARNING/ INSIGHTS
Orientation and Clinic Deployment • Courtesy meeting with the School Principal and HTE Supervisor. • Discussion of internship roles, responsibilities, and expectations. • Official endorsement and deployment to assigned clinical duties. Vital Signs Monitoring and Health Assessment • Monitored and recording of vital signs of teachers and staff. • Conducted routine health assessments. • Assisted in student general check-ups (Kindergarten to Grade 1). • Documentation and endorsement of significant findings to class advisers. Clinic Management and Documentation • Organization and inventory of clinic supplies. • Preparation of vital signs monitoring sheets and general check-up forms • Assistance in recording and tallying of health assessment results. School Health Program Planning and Medication Support • Distribution of authorized medications (paracetamol and deworming tablets). • Preparation of a three-week health program proposal aligned with OK sa DepEd.	During the first week of On-the-Job Training at San Isidro Elementary School, several challenges were encountered that required adjustment and the application of both theoretical knowledge and developing clinical skills. One of the primary difficulties was adapting to the fast-paced and dynamic workflow of a school health setting. Unlike the structured environment of academic training, the school clinic required the interns to manage multiple responsibilities simultaneously, such as taking vital signs, assisting in documentation, guiding patients, and supporting faculty during consultations. Balancing efficiency with accuracy was initially challenging, particularly during peak hours when patient volume was high. Communication also presented a challenge, particularly when conveying health instructions and guidance to young students in a manner that was clear, understandable, and age appropriate. Furthermore, coordinating with teachers and staff while adhering to clinic protocols required a high level of professionalism and attention to detail, which initially demanded adjustment and focus.	In reflecting on the experiences and challenges encountered during our first week of On-the-Job Training, several valuable insights emerged into the practical application of school health nursing principles and the vital role of primary health care services at the school. The importance of systematic documentation, accurate recording of vital signs, and proper endorsement of significant findings became evident as essential practices for continuity of care. Participation in routine check-ups and health program preparation highlighted the critical role of preventive care and early detection in promoting the overall well-being of both students and staff. The internship also strengthened professional communication and interpersonal skills, particularly in interacting with children, teachers, and clinic personnel. Additionally, the experience emphasized the need for organization, multitasking, and adherence to safety and infection control protocols, while fostering confidence in performing basic nursing procedures under supervision. Overall, the first week provided comprehensive learning opportunities that enhanced practical skills, clinical judgment, and professional competency in a school health environment.

WEEKLY STUDENT INTERNSHIP JOURNAL

WEEK 2

ACCOMPLISHMENT	DIFFICULTIES ENCOUNTERED	NEW LEARNING/ INSIGHTS
Vital Signs Monitoring and Health Assessment • Monitored and recorded vital signs for teachers, staff, and students. • Assisted in assessing minor student health concerns and provided first aid as needed. • Documented findings and endorsed significant health concerns to advisers and supervisors. Health Education and School Programs • Assisted in planning and facilitating the "SOAPer Hero" and "Ngiti Bright, Future Right" activities for students. • Prepared educational materials and posted health information in designated areas. Clinic Support and Organization • Assisted in minor clinical procedures and medication administration under supervision. • Maintained organized health records and clinic supplies. • Supported preparation of upcoming school health programs aligned with OK sa DepEd initiatives.	During the second week of internship, several challenges were encountered that required adaptability and continuous learning in a school-based setting. Monitoring vital signs and assisting in student health assessments simultaneously required careful prioritization and time management. Communicating instructions and guiding younger students during health education activities was sometimes challenging, as it required adapting explanations to ensure understanding. Additionally, coordinating the preparation of educational materials, supervising activities, and monitoring student participation demanded flexibility and quick problem-solving, especially when unforeseen situations arose, such as student absences or delayed materials. These challenges highlighted the need for careful planning, patience, and professional adaptability within a school health environment.	Week two provided further insights into the practical application of school health nursing, emphasizing the importance of preventive care, early intervention, and structured health education. The intern observed how organized planning, accurate documentation, and clear communication contribute to the smooth implementation of school health programs. Participation in health teaching activities strengthened skills in preparing and presenting educational materials and reinforced the value of engaging students in interactive learning. The experience also highlighted the significance of maintaining professional relationships with staff, teachers, and students while ensuring safety and adherence to protocols. Overall, the week enhanced clinical competence, organizational skills, and confidence in performing nursing tasks in a school-based setting, while demonstrating the impact of health initiatives on the well-being of students and school personnel.
